NEW QUESTION: 1

Your company has Active Directory Certificate Services (AD CS) and Network Access Protection (NAP) deployed on the network.

You need to ensure that NAP policies are enforced on portable computers that use a wireless connection to access the network.

What should you do?

- A. Use the Group Policy Management Console to access the wireless Group Policy settings, and disable the Prevent connections to infrastructure networks option.
- B. Configure all access points to use 802.1X authentication.
- C. Configure all portable computers to use MS-CHAP v2 authentication.
- D. Use the Group Policy Management Console to access the wireless Group Policy settings, and enable the Prevent connections to ad-hoc networks option.

Answer: B

Explanation:

802.1x authentication is specifically useful for access control from an access point. It lets us apply policies to clients based on the access point they are using (which is helpful with wireless connections)

MS-CHAPv2 is password-based authentication for communications; it will not let us enforce a particular NAP policy.

Restricting the types of wireless networks a user can connect to will not help enforce NAP, and could prevent them from being connected to the network at all (depending on whether you have any use for ad-hoc networks).
