An application sends Azure push notifications to a client application that runs on Windows Phone, iOS, and Android devices.

Users cannot use the application on some devices. The authentication mechanisms that the application uses are the source of the problem.

You need to monitor the number of notifications that failed because of authentication errors.

Which three metrics should you monitor? Each correct answer presents part of the solution.

NOTE: Each correct selection is worth one point.

- A. Channel errors
- B. Apple Push Notification Service (APNS) authentication errors
- C. External notification system errors
- D. Windows Push Notification Service (MPNS) authentication errors
- E. Firebase Cloud Messaging (FCM) authentication errors

Answer: B,D,E

Explanation:

A: You can use Azure Notification Hubs and Firebase Cloud Messaging to push notifications to an Android application.

B: The Windows Push Notification Services (WNS) enables third-party developers to send toast, tile, badge, and raw updates from their own cloud service. This provides a mechanism to deliver new updates to your users in a power-efficient and dependable way.

D: Because the device token assigned by the Apple Push Notification Service (APNS) can change at any time, you should register for notifications frequently to avoid notification failures.
