- C. Option D
- D. Option A

Answer: D

Explanation:

Explanation

Since Windows Server 2012 R2 (WS2012 R2) Hyper-V and Windows 8.1 Client Hyper-V, there are two generations of virtual machine hardware specification. Generation 1 virtual machines (the only generation on legacy versions of Hyper-V) make things a little tricky when it comes to PXE booting. The default (and better performing) synthetic Network Adapter (that leverages the Hyper-V integration components) does not support booting off of the network in Generation 1 virtual machines. If you do want to boot this type of virtual hardware using PXE then you must add an emulated Legacy Network Adapter.
