NEW QUESTION: 2

The task of verifying requirements is used to ensure that the requirements are ready for formal review and validation by the customers and for what other purpose?

- A. For defining the information to allow additional work to be performed
- B. For gaining approval of chartering the project
- C. For defining the specifications for the desired future state based on the solution
- D. For gaining approval of cost and schedule

Answer: A

Explanation:

Explanation

Requirement's verification allows the business analyst and key stakeholders to define any additional information that will allow any additional work to be performed. In other words, once the current requirements are approved, the tasks may continue forward based on what's been analyzed so far.

Answer D is incorrect. Gaining approval of the cost and schedule is not an accurate answer.

Answer B is incorrect. Chartering a project isn't the best answer for this question.

Answer A is incorrect. The requirements comprise the solution scope for the business need, so this isn't the best answer for the question.
