Answer:

Explanation:

Explanation

Box 1: Split data

Box 2: Partition and Sample

Box 3: Two-Class Boosted Decision Tree

Box 4: Tune Model Hyperparameters

Integrated train and tune: You configure a set of parameters to use, and then let the module iterate over multiple combinations, measuring accuracy until it finds a "best" model. With most learner modules, you can choose which parameters should be changed during the training process, and which should remain fixed.

We recommend that you use Cross-Validate Model to establish the goodness of the model given the specified parameters. Use Tune Model Hyperparameters to identify the optimal parameters.

NEW QUESTION: 3

Which of the following tools is less likely to be used by a hacker?

- A. John the ripper
- B. Crack
- C. l0phtcrack
- D. Tripwire

Answer: D

Explanation:

"Other security packages, such as the popular Tripwire data integrity assurance packages, also provide a secondary antivirus functionality. Tripwire is designed to alert administrators of unauthorized file modifications. It's often used to detect web server defacements and similar attacks, but it also may provide some warning of virus infections if critical system executable files, such as COMMAND.COM, are modified unexpectedly. These systems work by maintaining a database of hash values for all files stored on the system. These archive hash values are then compared to current computed values to detect any files that were modified between the two periods." Pg. 224 Tittel: CISSP Study Guide
