NEW QUESTION: 2
Your company uses Project Server 2013 to evaluate and select projects based on a primary cost constraint, as well as a secondary constraint of internal rate of return (IRR).
Management authorizes a budget and establishes a minimal IRR of 5% to execute any project the following year. Your company has never analyzed constraints other than cost.
As the portfolio analysis expert, you need to recommend a reasonable approach to perform the analysis.
What should you recommend?
A. Create the analysis and, during the cost analysis, introduce the secondary constraint to manually force out the non-compiling projects.
B. Create the analysis and, during the cost analysis, introduce the secondary constraint to automatically force out the non-compiling projects.
C. Create a new analysis through Portfolio Analysis and select the primary cost constraint. Then select an alias to force-out when defining properties and name it IRR.
D. Create a new analysis through portfolio analysis and select the primary and secondary constraints when defining properties.

Answer: A
