Answer: A

NEW QUESTION: 3

What happens when computers on a private network attempt to connect to the Internet through a Cisco router running PAT?

- A. An IP address is assigned based on the priority of the computer requesting the connection.
- B. The router selects an address from a pool of one-to-one address mappings held in the lookup table.
- C. The router uses the same IP address but a different TCP source port number for each connection.
- D. The router assigns a unique IP address from a pool of legally registered addresses for the duration of the connection.

Answer: C

Explanation:

Reference:

http://www.cisco.com/en/US/docs/security/asa/asa82/configuration/guide/nat_staticpat.html

Static PAT translations allow a specific UDP or TCP port on a global address to be translated to a specific port on a local address. That is, both the address and the port numbers are translated.

Static PAT is the same as static NAT, except that it enables you to specify the protocol (TCP or UDP) and port for the real and mapped addresses. Static PAT enables you to identify the same mapped address across many different static statements, provided that the port is different for each statement. You cannot use the same mapped address for multiple static NAT statements.

Port Address Translation makes the PC connect to the Internet but using different TCP source port.
